NOR MAJEBONI IN THE "OLD CORPORAL" AT

THE PIPTH AVENUE THEATRE. Entery's five not play "Le Vieux Caperal," the has been played here as "The Soldier's t," and is now produced at the above tre under the simple translation of the table, with Signer Mejeroni in the leading was beard last night with interest throughout nert, was heard last night with interest throughout and rewarded with frequent applicate. The event was nicresting, inasmuch as it presented to a New York udience snother artist to whom our vernacuer is an acquired tongue. Signor Majeront an Italian actor who supported Mime, instort, and now comes to interpret his clies in English. He speaks with a foreign account like Feschier's only more propounces. Reserv. and now comes to interpret his relies in English. He speaks with a loreign accent like Pechter's, only more pronounced. At times he is somewhat indistinct, but in mements of passion his voice is clear and full and his utterance round. The play, we need hardly say, is of the paintuity emotional nature, which a large class of our public recards as "absorbing," and which, when put on the stage with due attention to detail, draws large audiences for months at a time. A French corporal receives from his general as a sacred treat the care of the General's little literitimate daughter to rear her as his own, but with instructions to speak its mother's name to a certain notary, and so secure for her the General's property in case a soldier's death should overtake him before the end of the campaign, when he proposed making the child's mother his wife. The General is shot in a skirmish; the child is taken to the Corporal's nature village, which was also the home of the General, and there reared with the Corporal's son as his sister. Corporal Simon is wounded and taken prisoner to Rusain. He returns prematurely aged cleven years after. In the meantime a designing old rascal has in interited the General's property and is in love with Genevieve, the General's daughter, now a woman. By a trick a robbery is fastened on the poor Corporal, his passport stolen, and under the excitement of this charge he is struck with naralysis of the tongue and cannot sneak. The old man and the young people suffer. He explains his story to them in terrible pantemine. The girl's mother has married the friend of the general but she still place for her child. At list when the villanous false heir is on the point of speech is restored to the old corporal and all its set right. This, as will be seen, is "powerful," and at times becomes painful in its intensity, Signor Majeroni makes of it.

The support, on the whole, was fair, the villain, Pierre Frochard, being especially well played. Mr. Hamilton Harris, in the Mercond the intensity is pos e tragedy of "Virginius" was given at this the tre last night to a full house, with Mr. John McCulugh in the leading role. The character of Virginius garded as the best of Mr. McCullough's represen-es. He has devoted much study to an elaboraghter, before Appius Claudius, was the finest efauughter, before Appius Claudius, was the florst ef-fort of the evening. The support given him by the company was good. Mr. Wheeleck made a passable Icesius, Mr. Langdon a sair Appius, and the bluf old soldier, Dentatus, was creditably played by Mr. Bas-sett. Miss Stolia Boniface was the Virginia, and Miss Marie Prescott performed the part of Servis. The seenery and appointments were good. At the close of the third act Mr. McCullough was brought be-fore the cursain three times.

There was produced at the Academy of Music last vening a piece called "The Wife's Appeal," an original society temperance drama. The piece contained nothing but dialogue, and that of the statest, fietcest and most unprofitable kind. If it was intended as a and most upprofitable kind. If it was intended as a temperance lesson it was a failure, for if such drived was the effect of total abstinence the audience had a fearful warning. It is hard to say who acted like the biggest fools in the piece, the men who were under the influence of the flowing bowl or those who took nothing stronger than tea. We can hardly call "The Wife's Appeal" a drains; it was simply a diatogue, spoken to the shifting of scenery and enlivened by song and dance. The author stoully withholds his name, and we would advise him to continue to preserve his incognitio. With one or two executions the actors were scarcely known in New York. They did as well as they could under the circumt. They did as well as they could under the circum-stances. The audience was so small that we think an idea of the play must have been noised abroad.

LYCEUM THEATRE-"BOMEO AND JULIET." This seems to be an era of burlesquing Shakespeare, and no wonder, therefore, that the youthful and cal-low pupils of a "college of elecution and dramatic art" served up "Romeo and Juliet" to a circle of friends and a few strangers at the Lycoum Theatre last night. It was as ridiculous and sickly a performance as any number of school boys and school girls could well hope to give. Mr. Edwin Lawrence, the Romeo, is a young tragedian of ciphteen who (unconsciously) treated a rather noisy gallery to a great deal of tim. Miss Rose Kean's Junet was a trifte better and afforded also innocent hilarity. At one time the performance threatened to break up into a general row a la Count Joannes, but peace was fortunately preserved, and the rising Salvinis and Medjeskas of the Lycoum meandered, with many slips and hitches, through the play to the end.

STEINWAY HALL-THOMAS' CONCERT. Mr. John Lavine's third annual benefit concert was given at Steinway Hall last evening before a fairly good sudience. The performers consisted of Theodore Thomas' orchestra with Mr. William Mason, S. B. Kills, Mme Pappenheim and S. S. Sanford as soloists. The only novelty by the orchestra was the ballet music from Rubinstein's opera "The Demon." As ballet music it is very suggestive and would certainly be effective for dancing. It is light and graceful and introduces the cymbals in a somewhat Wagnerian and introduces the cymbals in a somewhat Wagnerian manner. It was beautifully played but did not arouse the audience to any great entinuaism. It remained for Boccherini's delicate and fanciful minuel, played on the muted violins, to call forth loud and loug apphance and to receive an encore. Mr. Masen and Mr. Sanford, an amateur, played a concerto, by Mozari, for two planes and orchestra. The little that was heard of the planes was thoroughly good. Mr. Mason's classic style is well known. Mr. sanford displayed a good touch and clean execution. We should prefer to hear him in a solo before pronouncing flually upon his merits as a planist. Mme. Pappenheim sang the famous scena sud arts from "Der Frenchfut;" and Schuman's "Widmung" and Gounod's "Frenchfut;" and Schuman's "Widmung" and Gounod's "Frenchfut;" and Schuman's near the two suited to her style, although she sang the two later with taste and delicacy. Hor voice, however, is heard to greater advantage in heroic music. She was warmly appliaded and encored, Mr. S. B. Mills played three selections from Chopin. While we cordially acknowledge Mr. Mills' excellences as a pianist we do not find him a natisfactory interpreter of Chopin. No one but Mme. Esspoff has interpreted Chopin as we understand him; even Rubinstein falied in this, but he gave us himself, and we were satisfied.

THE AQUARIUM-OPERATIC ENTERTAINMENT. It would scarcely be just to apply severe criticism te the company which has been employed to present operatic entertainment at the Aquarium. The performers comprised Mile. Rosetti, Mr. Graff and Julieu Francisco in the first act of "Il Trovatore;" but none of them succeeded in conveying the beauty which attaches to the melody of this well known work. The second act of "Martha" of this well known work. The second act of "Martha" was given in English, with Reseatt, Mettler, Graff and Preusser. "The Last Rose of Summer" was very roorly sung. The tenor, however, made a better impression, and hiss sessior earned well merited commendation by her rendition of the part of Nancy. In the second act of "Lucretia Borgia," which was the last part of the programme, Mr. Baillen and Folix Preusser sang with much lerver and divided honors with Mile. Reseats, who took the part of Lucretia. It is a question whether this breaking up of popular operas, even by the best of artists, will be accepiable to the musical public, While we like gems we prefer individuality.

BROADWAY THEATRE-GRETCHEN.

Mile. Imogene made her first appearance last evening at the Broadway Theatre in "Gretchen, the Shepherdess of Jura," a play in five acts and five tableaux fall of exciting, if not strictly novel, incidents. The lady created a favorable impression in the title rdie, which she invested with a good scal of grace and interest by her intelligent lutilizent of its requirements. The piece was carefully set by the management, and Miss Imagene's support was, if not all that could be desired, passable, "Gretchen" will be re-peated every evening this work and on Wednesday and Saturday alternoon.

A somewhat singular performance was given last evening at the San Francisco Musicole' Opera House. Mr. Ernest Patrizio, "The humorous thaumaturgist and transcendental necromancer," as the bills describing furnished the entertainment, which was divide bim, turnished the chtertainment, which was divided into three parts. He has been seen before at the Union League Club by many of our best crizens, and last night repeated many of his most successful experiments in the art disbolice. Chief among these was the catching of a cannin ball fired, apparently with a bond fade intent, at Patrizio, who stood ten test from the cannon. The delusion was perfect. He caught the ball in his hans; his hair was covered with the fire of the charge, and he left the impression on the audience, as lar, at least, as this experiment is concerned, that he is one of the most skillul of modern magicians. His enternamment will be continued until intriber notice. He lacks the ability to express himself in perfect English, but compensates for this defect by the excellence of his pressingitation. The enterlainment is "leasantly diversified by the presence of Mma. Rits Gail Patrizio, who exhibits extraordinary powers of memory in what may be called an experiment, and yet invites criticiam by every one who is familiar with the study of mamenaics. Her knowledge of names, figures and facts covering a list hall bour of suggestions by the audience is simply wonderful.

At the Brooklyn Park Theatre last evening a large audience witnessed the performance of Bulwer's great audience witnessed the performance of Bulwer's great play of "Richelieu," with Lawrence Barrett in the title rô's. Mr. Barrett's conception of the wily Cardinal is not as subtle, but in other respects it may be accepted as equal, to Mr. Booth's, and, where passion is appropriate, more vicerous and more approaching to the grandeur of true heroism. The impersonation of the inferior characters was, however, not altogether what it should be. Miss Elled Cummens as Julia betrayed her imperfect training, and she failed to express many of the more delicate points in her part. Mr. Power found do Mauprat too exacting a rôte, aithough he streve faithfully to fill it. Mr. Laugdon as Baradas was more successful, but Mr. Vance as De Beringhen failed to properly interpret the character.

THE "DARING SHOT."

PHILADELPHIA, April 29, 1878. TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD :-

During my absence from New York city with my travelling company my attention was attracted to an advertisement in your amusement columns of a performance to be given at my theatre, which is now performance to be given at my theatre, which is now under a different management, by a Miss Jennie Franklin, who was announced as the "daring shot and principal in the terrible catastrophe and killing of an innocent woman on the stage, at Pawtuckst, R. I."
Innamuch as the public may imagine that, in consequence of the performance being given at the theatre which bears my name, I am a party to this inhuman trading on only too sad an event, I take this opportunity of disclaiming any participation in this means of continuing an unevisable publicity of a calamity which all right-minded people regret and which should be suffered to reak in silence, My past career as a caterer of pure, innocent amusement is sufficient surely that no one would be least capable of what I regard eminestly out of place and in the strongest degree outrageous than myself.

AN "UNPARALLELED COMBINATION" OF COL-ORFD ABTISTS AT LYRIC HALL.

Norty two hundred lights blazed last evening, or rather would have blazed had the gas pressure been sufficient, in the auditorium of Lyric Hall. A number of lesser lights, chiefly of historial brilliance, shone on the stage of that temple of Terpsichore or went out in ectipse. Tom Taylor, the Commonwealth Dramatic wealth Dramatic Club is a celored amateur dramatic association when bossis of a "talented young amateur actor," an "unequalled colored tragedience," and counded of these an "unparalleled combination." Yerily the combination is unparalleled. Last night all these powers for good or evil were brought to bear in the representation of Tom Taylor's meledrama, "The Fool's Revenge." Months had been given to preparation. The fiddles had fiddled their finest, and had such exquisite chords ready for the most melodramatic passages that even the most fistidious would not venture to protest. The leading lady was perfect in her part, and the representative of Bertuccio was a prodigy. The audience arrived slowly, and the colored portion of it was undoubtedly late. A great many of the gentlement had been doing duty it down town restaurants half an hour before, and some of the leadies that came in veneral with those which, like Tennysen's old tavern, have been "larded with the Tennysen's old tavern, have been "larded with the trompsen's old tavern, have been "larded with the broad trophies had touched every one except the gas man, who did not put on the pressure sufficiently until the third act, a circumstance which was much against a proper display of the thows and muscless which the "consumery" gentlemen had built up under the hose of the ducal character in the play. But is spite of this the representation went on from trumph to triumph. "A "marine' go with her," says Torelli, in reference to Malatesta's wife, an original reading, doubtiess preferable to "murrain," and contaming the sting ag implication that the one positive order. COMPLIMENTARY BENEFIT.

The Argyle rooms were crowded last night with members of the sporting fraternity, the occasion being a complimentary benefit to Joe Goss and Mike Donevan, the puglitate. For this purpose, in the centre of the ball, was a raised platform, round which were the familiar ropes of the prize ring. The pro-gramme consisted of sparring, club awinging and collar and elbow wresting. The first and collar and ellow wrestling. The first sparring contestants were two youths named McCabe and Engel; these were followed by Bob Carman and John Stack; King from Troy, and J. Moore, who all fought a number of rouses. Then came Phyter and Corbett, who were introduced by old Brit Tovec as two of his pupile; Pat Jordan and Jim Naylor, John Sanders and John Ritey, John Corbett and John Connoilly, whose sparring exhibitions citeted considerable applause. After the aparrers came Stephen O'Donnell and John Fiynn, who gave an lituatation of collar and elbow wreatling, in which Donovan w. a the victor in two falls. This, according to the unpire, ended "the fooling," and the spectators were invited to witness an exhibition of "science" in the victor's of Joe Goas and Johnup Dwyer, who, after several rounds, vacated the ring for Professor Laftin, who, with a pair of Indian club, weighing seven and a noit pounds each, and one club, weighing thirteen pounds, performed a number of muscular wonders. Arthur Chambers and Callighau then gave a few rounds of light weight sparring, and after several rounds by other pugitists of more restricted fame the event of the evening came off in a set-to between Billy Edwards and Mike Donovan. This put the crowded specuators into a thrill of excitament, and oach man was loudly applanded and oneered by his friends.

The would be murderer was none other than Joseph 1576, robbed the residence of Mrs. Nathan Adolphus No. 117 Adolphi street, Brooklyn, as well as the resi on the 24th of last December, was recorded in yester day's HERALD. The particulars of both these rob bories, as well as the errest of their perpetrator and his subsequent attempt upon his accuser's life, are given below.

It appears that for rome time past Joseph Ottenberg has been sought after by the police on several charges of a scrous nature. The antecedents of this well known and successful crimineal form quite an exciting chapter in the history of municipal ortime. He has been the leader and organ-izer of a series of robberies in this city, which for a long time baffled the skill of the police. He has been several times arrested and imprisoned, but on each occasion succeeded in making good his escape.

ROBBERY AND ESCAPE. the routery of Mr. Adolphus' house, in Brooklyn. On the dute mentioned above three men rang the belt of Mr. Adolphus' house. The servant, in response, came to the door, when she was seized by the throat by one of the men, while another levelled a pistol at her need. In this manner resistance was prevented and her screams stienced. One of the mon kept the servant a prisoner, while the others ransacked the house from which the family was absent. They took with them soout $450 worth of property. The robbery was reported to the collee, and two men were arrested and identified as being the thieves. Their names are Caris Spencer, who is now in the Albany Pentientlary, and a man known as "Chicago Billy," and threatened to get "square" with that gentleman.

A munkmours pession rittwared.

Nothing of consequence transpired until the fricthst is, Descotive Adams, his prisoner and Mr. St. John—bai reached the Central Office. While being searched the prisoner suddenly pulled a pistol from his coast pocked and with a quick movement levelied it as Mr. St. Jeno. The latter at the time had his back turned to the desdly weapon and was in the act of taking a drink of water. Detective Adams, observing the metion in time, tripped the woold-be murderer and he left with a heavy thad to the floor. The weapon was wrenched from his grasp and a pair of handcuffs put it out of his power to carry his bloodthirsty designs into execution.

wrenched from his grasp and a part of handcuffs put it out of his power to carry his bloodthirsty designs into execution.

A HARDENED CRIMINAL.

The prisoner was next taken to Brooklyn and arraigned before Judge Riley on the complaint of Mr. Adolphus, the first virtim of his thieving propensitioe. In response to the usual questions he gave his age as twenty years and mis occupation as that of a taiof. He claimed that he was confided in Albany Penitentary under the name of Joseph Osborne at the time Mr. Adolphus' house was robbed, and that he was discharged from that institution on July 15, 1877. He asked for an adjournment of his examination to enable him to engage counsel in his defence, and Judge Riley theroupon set down his case for next Wednesday. In the meantime remanding him to jul. On seaving the court he bosanted of his attempt to take the lits of Mr. St. John. He said he would rather "awing" than go to jul. He confessed that he intended to kill the detective as well, in the hope of making good his escape. While confined in the Thirteenth precinct a woman called and asked to be permitted to see the prisoner. This woman was ideatified as the servant who was formerly in the employ of Mr. St. John's mother and who is known to be Ottenberg's suster. Her request was not greated, as sho was known to have conveyed a pistol to him while he was incareerated at White Plains, for the purpose of using it on the prisoner of effect his eacape.
